one sentence. Probably the only reason he acknowledged all those letters was so he could put in a plug for his book and make money off the suckers.

Ted

And by way, on that manila envelope, the tape on it is glued on with glue that I made myself, 3 years ago when I killed that elk, by boiling down the hooves of deer and elk.

Merry Christmas.
This is your Christmas card. Maybe this is early to send it, but if I wait, then maybe it will be too late on account of the rush.

When I was in California, nearly 2 years ago, I saw a letter in the paper by one Francois Leydet who said he was writing a book on predators and asked readers to send him any interesting personal experiences with predators or any information, etc. So I sent him accounts of some of my encounters with predators. I just got a letter from him in which he said he got so much mail in response to his letter that it took a long time to get around to acknowledging it all, etc., etc. Anyway, he says that in his soon-to-be-published book The Coyote: Defiant songdog of the west, "I mention your recipe for Coyote stew on Page 86..." Actually I didn't give him a recipe, exactly, I just stated that Coyote is good when cut into bite-size chunks and simmered for a couple of hours. At least, I don't remember giving any more of a recipe than that.

Watch out for a large manila envelope I am sending you, and please let me know when it arrives.

Now do it go and buy that damn book just to read that
